COVID-19 PANDEMIC

Jefferson County records first virus-related death

BY COLLIN OVERTON

The Jefferson County Health Department confirmed the county's first death from COVID-19, an adult patient who had been battling the virus on a ventilator, in a release issued Monday.

Until Monday's announcement, Jefferson County had reported lower numbers cases and no deaths compared to most neighboring counties. According to state data last updated Thursday, the county had 35 positive cases and zero deaths, while nearby Clark, Scott, Jennings and Ripley Counties all had 80 or more cases and two to 25 deaths per county.

According to the department, the patient had been hospitalized as a COVID-19 patient from the time of diagnosis until their death.

"The health department would like to stress that this disease is still prevalent," the statement said. "Positive cases continue to be reported steadily, and this death should serve as a grim reminder of the severity of the disease. We urge you to continue to follow the guidance and recommendations related to masking, social distancing, group gatherings, hand hygiene, and general disinfection, so that we have the best possible chance for preventing another tragedy, like this one, from happening in our wonderful community."

Public Health Coordinator Blythe Couch could not provide additional information on the patient or when they became ill, but noted that less than five other Jefferson County patients are currently on ventilators.

County Health Officer Dr. John Hossler said it was not King's Daughters' Health's policy to identify patients singularly because the facility has a small enough patient base that identifying details like age and/or gender might be enough to jeopardize a patient's right to privacy. However, he did say it was fair to say that the people currently being treated on ventilators at KDH are in the age 40 to 80 range.

Meanwhile, Couch urged residents to "keep doing what they've been doing" and follow social distancing policies, wash hands frequently for 20 seconds and wear masks when out in public for their safety and the safety of others.

After weeks of being shut down due to the COVID-19 emergency, Curl Up and Die Again owner/stylist Kari Long, like many other hair stylists and barbers in Madison, was back at work in her shop Monday morning as customers were already booked far in advance for haircuts and other procedures. Long said she's booked solid through May 20. The state reopened beauty and barber shops in its latest round of reopenings but with extra personal protection equipment in use and by appointment only with patrons waiting in their cars until they are called inside for their procedures.

With most graduation ceremonies either canceled, modified or postponed due to the COVID-19 emergency, area schools and colleges have looked to other options to recognize and honor their graduates. Ivy Tech's Madison Campus turned its property along Clifty Drive into a drive of celebration by placing dozens of signs alphabetically recognizing each of its 2020 graduates.

"I still try to pretend like it's at its worst," said Couch, who said she hasn't been to a grocery store since March 13 and tries to practice what she preaches by wearing masks, ordering groceries for pick-up and getting prescriptions through the drive-through services.

Jefferson County's first death comes at a time when more than more local businesses are partially reopening. Hair salons, retail stores and restaurants are reopening in limited capacity in accordance with the state's Back on Track Indiana plan. Several hair salons in Madison were permitted to open Monday, like Curl Up and Dye Again, where owner/stylist Kari Long said appointments were filling up fast and with her salon booked through Wednesday, May 20.

Restrictions are easing in similar fashion nationwide, with some stores, beaches, shopping malls and state parks already reopening on May 4 and more opening this week.

Critics of the closings have highlighted the economic impact of a shutdown economy, while others say the reopenings are premature and may expose residents at a time when the virus curve is just beginning to flatten.

Lake County, one of the hotbed counties in northwest Indiana where Stage 2 of Back on Track originally didn't apply, joined the rest of the state Monday in reopening salons, barbershops and some retail stores, according to the Northwest Indiana Times. The county has so far recorded 2,493 cases and 125 deaths with 13,283 residents tested.

"Yes things are opening up, but like we said in the last weekly briefing, we don't encourage a false sense of security," Couch said.

Naked man arrested at S.R. 62 and 256

Derek A. Ledbetter

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

The City of Madison Police Department arrested a Madison man Sunday evening after the man reportedly stood naked in the area of the intersection of State Roads 62 and 256, according to a police department release.

Madison Police Patrolman Cameron Blankenship arrived to assist Deputies C.J. Miller and Curtis Shelpman of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Office after receiving a report of a naked male standing at the heavily traveled intersection.

Motorists passing through the intersection took mobile photos and videos of Ledbetter walking around the area unclothed, waiving and motioning at passing cars. Some posted pictures on social media.

Blankenship spotted the man upon arrival — not wearing clothes — in the parking lot of Cruisin' Auto Sales, 3713 Clifty Drive. Sheriff's deputies took Derek A. Ledbetter 33, Madison, into custody without incident around 6 p.m.

According to investigating officers, Ledbetter told police he was attempting to satisfy a "religious mission." He was been charged with public indecency and lodged in the Jefferson County Jail.

Main Street grant for businesses extended to June

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Downtown businesses impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic can continue applying for local help this month thanks to new donations to the Madison Main Street Program's Business Resiliency Fund.

Through the City of Madison Department of Economic Development, Main Street obtained a $5,000 grant from the Duke Energy Foundation that will extend the Resiliency Fund to June and hopefully cover up to 50% of monthly payments for businesses. The deadline to apply is Friday, May 22, and applicants will be notified of their status by Thursday, May 28, according to a release.

"We awarded over $10,000 in the May round and are glad we're able to extend it for another month," said Main Street Executive Director Austin Sims. "Even though businesses are slowly beginning to open back up, we know it will take them many months to recover from financial losses caused by the pandemic."

Demand far outweighed expectations in the month of April, when the nonprofit started the fund to help business owners pay rent, mortgage

Switzerland man dies in motorcycle crash

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

A Switzerland County man died in what appears to have been a single vehicle accident involving a motorcycle on Kennett Road West just west of East Enterprise on Saturday.

Switzerland County Coroner Clinton Earls said Gerald Lee "Jerry" Gray, 58, of near Fairview, was pronounced dead at the scene after the motorcycle he was riding went off the roadway for unknown reasons and collided with a tree head-on.

The accident, which was discovered by a passing motorist who called police, occurred at about 1 p.m. Saturday about 2.5 miles west of East Enterprise. Gray, who lives close to the scene of the crash, was not wearing a helmet.

Earls, who is also a deputy with the Switzerland County Sheriff's Office, said the crash is being investigated by the coroner's office and the sheriff's office. No foul play is suspected but the investigation is ongoing pending completion of an autopsy and toxicology reports.

Investigators are hoping a witness or passerby can provide additional details about the crash since the motorist who reported the crash to authorities did not remain at the scene until first responders could arrive.

Anyone with information about the crash is asked to call the Switzerland County Sheriff's Office at 812-427-36236. The sheriff's office and coroner were assisted at the scene by Indiana State Police and the East Enterprise Fire Department.

Friends fund Lanier paint project

BY SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Although the Lanier Mansion State Historic Site along the Ohio River in Madison remains closed due to the COVID-19 emergency, the grounds and gardens of the site are open to the public and the Francis Costigan-designed Greek Revival former home of James F.D. Lanier may have never looked better.

The Friends of Lanier Mansion are urging visitors who drive, walk or bicycle past to check out the new exterior paint. The long overdue work was recently done thanks to people who contributed money in collections taken at Music at the Mansion free concerts as well as through fundraisers, sent donations and bought memberships.

The paint job cost $67,262.59, of which the Friends of Lanier Mansion paid $67,000 because the Indiana State Museum & Historic Sites Corp., which oversees the 11 state historic sites including Lanier, was unable to fund the project.

The Friends of Lanier Mansion is a 501©(3) nonprofit organization dedicated to the betterment of the James F.D. Lanier Mansion, 601 W. First St. The mansion is a National Historic Landmark as well as a state historic site.

"It has taken many years to raise these funds, and we are very thankful that we were able to support this project," said Kate Brown, president of the Friends.

There is still more work to be done, such as restoring the acroteria — the decorative trim originally seen on the roof — repairing the wrought iron fencing, installing a hand rail for the north entrance, installing night lighting of the Mansion and replacing broken windows, she said.

"The Friends have been working with the Indiana State Museum and Historic Sites Corp. to get these projects rolling and to not defer maintenance in the future," Brown said. "It will take a great deal of money. Maintaining a historic house is an ongoing job, but the Friends are committed and have a dedicated board that will do their best to keep it in shape. The JFD Lanier Mansion is a precious gift that has been given to us all and we have a responsibility to cherish and preserve it to the best of our abilities."

RUNNING FOR AHMAUD

Runners meet at the Venture Out Business Center on Friday to take part in the 2.3-mile run in honor and memory of Ahmaud Arbery, who was killed in Georgia in April. The run was part of a nationwide campaign to draw attention to the case. Two men were arrested for the killing late last week.

Plan Commission allows split of 127-acre farm

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

The Jefferson County Plan Commission approved splitting a 127-acre farm on S.R. 356 in Lexington into three separate parcels during a light meeting agenda last week.

Commissioners unanimously approved applicant Dean Ford's request to parcel his property into one 1.8628-acre residential lot and two agricultural lots — one 74.226 acres and the other 51.685 acres.

Commission Chair Warren Auxier confirmed that the property will remain in agricultural use since a few residents living in the area had inquired to make sure the tract would not become a housing development. The residential lot will only include the farmhouse, he said.

Ford is legally allowed to make one more split in the property within the next year without having to consult the Plan Commission, the commission's legal counsel Patrick Magrath said. After that, all other parceling must be approved by the commission within the year.

The Plan Commission is scheduled to meet again on June 3 at 4:45 p.m. over the web conferencing app Zoom.

Lane closures planned on S.R. 62 in Clark County

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Motorists driving State Road 62 in Clark County should expect lane closures starting this week and for the next three weeks due to an asphalt repair project from the Jefferson-Clark county line on the east to Monroe Street in Charlestown on the west.

MAC Construction is expected to begin asphalt patching as part of a district-wide pavement rehabilitation contract. Lane closures will be in place while work is in progress, with flaggers on site to maintain traffic. Motorists should slow down, watch for stopped traffic, and drive distraction-free through all work zones.

All work is weather dependent.

H1 test session canceled

David Campbell

(From left) The U-11 J&D's, the U-6 Miss HomeStreet and the U-12 Graham Trucking fly down the front stretch during the Lake Guntersville Hydrofest in Alabama last year. The Unlimited Racing Group, which owns the U-11, may run a second boat this season, joining the HomeStreet and Graham as multiple-boat teams.

URG co-owner: Team may run two boats

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

The annual H1 Unlimited Spring Training session in the Tri-Cities, Washington has become the latest Unlimited hydroplane event to be canceled by the COVID-19 pandemic.

The daily session, which was to be held on June 6 on the Columbia River, was canceled by the Tri-Cities Water Follies last week. The event is not necessarily a public event, but it has become the traditional kickoff to the hydroplane season as teams hit the fastest water on the circuit to test out offseason changes.

The season-opening race in Guntersville, Alabama — set for June 27-28 — was canceled in late March and the Madison Regatta, which was set to host the APBA Gold Cup for the second-straight year, was canceled last month.

Currently, there are only three races left on the circuit, beginning with the race in the Tri-Cities July 25-27. Kathy Powell, event director for the Tri-Cities race, told the Tri-City Herald that she is hopeful that it will go on as planned.

"I've talked to Rob Graham (owner of the Graham Trucking boats), and he is eager to race," Powell told the paper. "(Miss Madison President) Charlie Grooms called me and wanted to know our status. He's ordered propellers for his team."

Powell said the Water Follies board of directors will likely make a decision on the Tri-Cities event at its June meeting.

In addition to the Tri-Cities race, H1 will also run in Seattle July 31-Aug. 2 and San Diego Sept. 18-20.

URG MAY RUN TWO BOATS

The number of races may be dwindling but the number of boats continue to rise.

Unlimited Racing Group co-owner and crew chief Scott Raney said in an interview with the H1 Unlimited Facebook page that the team is preparing two hulls for the 2020 season.

The team has already been campaigning its primary boat, the U-11 J&D's, but spent the offseason getting its other boat, the former Miss Budweiser T4 hull, ready for action as well. The T4 was the team's primary hull until damage from several wrecks forced it to the sidelines.

"We spent all winter, put a lot of effort and resources, with the support of J&D's, and have done a refurbishment of the T-4," Raney told H1. "Potentially we're positioning ourselves to maybe (run two boats), maybe we're not."

Should the URG decide to run two boats it will be just the latest team to decide to campaign two boats.

The Miss Madison team ran two boats for the second half of last season, with Jimmy Shane steering the primary U-1 Miss HomeStreet to the National High Points Championship and Jeff Bernard seeing action in three races aboard the U-1918 Oberto Quality Meats. The team is expected to run at least two boats again this season.

Rob Graham's Graham Trucking team sent two boats to every race last season, with J. Michael Kelly steering the U-12 and Corey Peabody in the U-98.

Two other teams have indicated that they may run two boats this season. Dave Bartush's Spirit of Detroit team will run the U-7, driven by Bert Henderson, and the U-10, driven by Patrick Haworth. Bucket List Racing owners Kelly and Sharon Stocklin will run the U-440 and possibly a second hull as well. The team purchased the former U-99.9 boat in the offseason.

Colts' Rivers named head coach-in-waiting at Alabama HS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAIRHOPE, Ala. — Indianapolis Colts quarterback Philip Rivers has already lined up the first job of his post-playing career.

Rivers was introduced Friday as the head coach-in-waiting at St. Michael Catholic High School in a news conference on campus.

The 16-year veteran of the Los Angeles Chargers signed a one-year deal worth $25 million guaranteed in March. Rivers didn't offer a timetable on when he'd actually be available for the Fairhope school.

"I think it's a one-year-at-a-time deal at this point, when you get to 38 and you've played as long as I have," Rivers said. "Ï think you take it one year at a time. We hope it's more than one year, but I think it's one year at a time and go from there."

Athletic director Paul Knapstein will serve as St. Michael's interim head coach in the meantime.

Rivers is coming off one of his worst NFL seasons, throwing for just 23 touchdowns with 20 interceptions for the Chargers.

But the Alabama native ranks sixth in league history in completions, yards passing and TD passes and seventh in attempts and is 123-101 as an NFL starter. He hasn't missed a start since 2005.

St. Michael Principal Faustin Weber doesn't know how long the school will have to wait until Rivers is done on the field.

"But when his career is over, that January or February after his last season, he'll be here for spring practice that spring," Weber said.

Emmert: Unlikely all schools will start seasons at same time

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE FOOTBALL WRITER

NCAA President Mark Emmert says the coronavirus is making it unlikely all schools will be ready to begin competing in college sports at the same time.

The goal, he said Friday night, is for every team to have an equal amount of preparation time before its season starts, and there could be some competitive inequities caused by schools having varied timelines for re-opening campuses.

Emmert appeared with Dr. Brian Hainline, the NCAA's chief medical officer, in an interview shown on the NCAA's official Twitter account Friday night.

Major football conference commissioners have stated their goal is for all 130 teams in 10 conferences across 41 states to begin the season at the same time. As states impacted differently by the COVID-19 pandemic re-open on different schedules, the possibility rises that the season will lack a uniform start date and number of games.

"I think we should assume that's going to be the case," Emmert said.

For football, the working plan is six weeks of conditioning and practice before playing games, though that's not "set in stone," Hainline said.

"All the various (NCAA) member committees and the conferences are all talking about: What does it mean if we have that sort of scenario where we've got different opening times or different opening models," Emmert said.

"What does it mean if you look at a conference, for example, if a conference has some schools open and some not?" he added. "You can't run a regular schedule if you've got that scenario. How do you adjust all the rules to provide as much flexibility as you possibly can to let student-athletes have a good experience in that season?"

FBS schools are required by NCAA rules to play at least nine games, including five at home.

The FBS season is scheduled to begin around Labor Day weekend, with a handful of teams starting the Aug. 29, the Saturday before Labor Day.

Most teams are scheduled to play 12 regular-season games through Thanksgiving weekend. The first weekend of December each FBS conference plays a league championship game.

GRANT

and preserve their business during the worst financial crisis since the Great Recession. Funds from the Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County and other individuals gave Main Street $10,000 to cover assistance requested from the program, Sims said.

The demand, however, totaled nearly $45,000 in requested assistance, said Main Street Board President Valecia Crisafulli at the time.

Main Street had hoped to cover up to 50% of payments for businesses in May, but opted to spread the funds out to cover help more businesses and ended up covering at least 30% per business, Sims said Monday.

The nonprofit would like to cover more, and combined with incoming donations from residents, Main Street will hopefully get there, Sims said. About $1,000 from the last round has carried over to this month due to a couple of business owners whose landlords forgave their payments for the month. They passed on the assistance so that their neighbors could received the help, she said.

The help might prove crucial to businesses reopening this month as the state conducts Stage 2 of the Back on Track Indiana plan. Factories were allowed to fully reopen with some restrictions May 4 while nonessential retailers could reopen at 50% capacity. Starting Monday, restaurants were allowed to reopen at 50% capacity, although bar seating is still not allowed.

"This is a financial crisis as much as it is a health emergency for Indiana," Duke Energy Madison Community Relations Manager Lisa Huber said in the release. "These are grants for Indiana's small businesses that keep our communities going. Over a century we've operated in this state and served good companies such as these."

Pandemic activities that make the glass half full

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: In the midst of all the negativity toward the coronavirus pandemic challenges, it is easy to look at the glass as being half empty. In some ways, however, the glass is half full. Here is a partial list:

In the South, where I live, the pandemic happened during excellent weather, encouraging people to get outside and exercise, and to do yardwork. There is less rush-hour traffic, lower gas prices and more time to spend with the immediate family — maybe even away from the TV and video games.

This is also an opportunity to:

1. Clean out closets and drawers.

2. Hand-wash and detail your vehicle.

3. Try all those recipes you have been keeping and never had time to attempt

4. REALLY do spring-cleaning.

5. Plant a garden and grow your own vegetables (since you can't find them in the store anyway!).

It is also an opportunity to remember and truly appreciate all those things we regularly take for granted, such as:

1. Sitting in a nice restaurant, with a tablecloth and cloth napkins, and a candle on the table, and a waiter or waitress to make your meal perfect.

2. Going to a grocery store and actually having options of brands and sizes of various products — not just having to take what is available, if there (SET ITAL) is (END ITAL) anything available.

3. Being able to return items ... for ANY reason

Also, for those of you who are hesitant to meet new people because you don't like to be touched or hugged, 6-foot social distancing makes you the new normal and will allow you to be more comfortable as yourself! Ditto with OCD germophobes! We are all on the same team!

Graduation is coming up, and most students will not have the traditional ceremony that they have been working hard for, and expecting. Why not have a graduation ceremony at home, complete with caps and gowns (which are probably already paid for anyway) and a homemade diploma (if the real one is not available) presented by the parents who were instrumental in encouraging them to reach this stage in their life. They can also video the entire ceremony to share with family and friends who cannot be there because of social distancing.

We can't ignore the pandemic. At some point, it will be a part of our history. For now we can make the best of the situation, and look for positives. — Pandemic Positives

Dear Pandemic Positives: Yours is a great letter filled with practical tips to help us make lemonade out of a lemon. Thank you.

Anonymous helpers might scare seniors

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am a 77-year-old woman, recently transplanted after 50 years in a different city and province. Due to COVID-19, I am really isolated — alone in my apartment 99% of the time. I go out once a week to shop, and every two or three weeks I'll go to the laundry room. Four generations of my family live in a triplex. I live in a building with 400 apartments and probably more than 2,000 people, ranging from seniors to large families to university students. I don't want to put my family in danger coming near me! Senior services are available, but I like to choose my own food.

In my laundry room, someone put up an offer to help seniors during the crisis. Although that person left phone numbers to tear off, they did not say who they are or in which apartment they live. It may even be someone in the neighborhood, not a fellow resident.

Friday, I got a note in the mail telling me I am "being thought of during this time" and wishing me well. There was no signature on the card or return address on the envelope.

On the surface, these seem like acts of kindness, but instead, they may cause anxiety over and above what seniors are already experiencing being alone and the prime target for this virus. Seniors know to beware, as we are the target of scams. Getting an anonymous note saying someone is thinking of you is creepy in the best of times and more scary now.

Please tell anyone reaching out to seniors to identify themselves. — Thanks but No Thanks!

Dear Thanks but No Thanks!: Those acts sound more like acts of cowardice or, more likely, acts of laziness. If people want to reach out and help someone, they need to let the person know who they are. Being alone 99% of the time is challenging. While the phone is good, it is also important to see the person on the other end of the line. Humans are visual beings, and it helps us feel more connected when we can look someone in the eye, even if it is through a screen. I encourage you to reach out to family members and set up videoconferencing calls through applications such as FaceTime.

Dear Annie: I am a biologist and an admirer of the mouse. Given my experience with mice, I wanted to clarify a few things.

First, you can in fact release mice that you have caught in a live trap, especially if the weather is nice. They can be released in surrounding fields or woods, or near shelter like a stone wall. Wild mice are burrowers and will build new nests and adapt quickly where there is suitable cover and food, and they eat almost everything.

Second, young mice are not called "children"; they are called pups. Do not compare a relocated mouse with a displaced human family, as there is no comparison.

Third, there are humane ways of getting rid of them. The simplest is using peppermint or ammonia as safe deterrents.

Please, never use glue traps, as they cause the mouse to die a horrible, slow death. Poison is perhaps the worst of all because the dead mouse can then be picked up by dogs, cats, foxes, hawks and owls, which in turn will be poisoned. If you must use a trap to kill them, the old snap trap is the last resort. — A Mouse Admirer

Dear Mouse Admirer: While no one wants a wild mouse in their house, I love that you go through humane ways to keep them out. When given the choice, always use the mechanism that causes the least amount of suffering to all beings. Thank you for your professional expertise and kindhearted approach.

Visitors flock to Smoky Mountains park on reopening day

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GATLINBURG, Tenn. — The reopening of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park was a little too tempting of a draw Saturday as scores of nature lovers from dozens of states crowded trails and trekked into blocked-off areas, a spokeswoman said.

Even with some of the most popular trails closed, parking lots were packed and lines of cars snaked down tree-lined streets, in one case for about a mile leading up to a waterfall path, according to park spokeswoman Dana Soehn. Many people did not wear masks.

"It seemed like people were not respecting our suggestion that they avoid crowded areas," said Soehn, adding that she counted license plates from 24 different states in one visitor center parking lot.

Visitors also walked past heavy barricades on one of the park's most trafficked trails, Laurel Falls, which was closed off to heed federal social distancing guidelines, she said.

On the Tennessee-North Carolina border, the Great Smoky Mountains is the county's most visited national park. It was closed March 24 after officials said it was becoming too congested during the coronavirus pandemic.

Park officials said the first phase of restrictions will last at least two weeks. Management will then decide whether to reopen secondary roads and campgrounds, and later, lift all restrictions.

The reopening was announced after park officials said they made sure the park was aligned with federal, state and local authorities and that employees had enough personal protective gear. Authorities have stressed that visitors must also practice social distancing.

At the Smokies, officials have said rangers will monitor roads and emergency situations, but won't be specifically policing people. Instead, Soehn has said she hopes people will visit the park in a way that keeps staffers safe.

"We'll continue to push out our messaging that we want them to be responsible," Soehn said. "We would encourage them to make choices to keep themselves safe."

President Donald Trump has prioritized reopening national parks as a sign of "significant progress against the invisible enemy" of the pandemic, even as cases rise in an outbreak that has devastated the U.S. economy.

Park officials said the first phase of restrictions will last at least two weeks. Management will then decide whether to reopen secondary roads and campgrounds, and later, lift all restrictions.

Many national parks remain fully or partially closed, though Bryce Canyon and Zion National Park in Utah and the Everglades National Park in Florida have also announced phased reopenings. Federal authorities have yet to publicly announce timelines for other closed parks to reopen.
